

Leadership styles in diplomatic discourse: a case study of the 72nd UN General Assembly speeches (2017)

Hosted by 1st Year Students

ROOM 401

May 10-24, 2018

First Year Students Conference Committee would like to cordially invite you to attend the 2018 Spring Semester Open Conference at the Institute of International Relations and Political Science, May 10-24 of 2018. Attendees will have an opportunity to listen to the analysis of political speeches delivered by various world leaders in terms of their implied ideology and leadership styles. The speakers will mainly focus on the political meaning of rhetoric, ideology and myth in the speeches delivered during the 72nd UN General Assembly (2017).

Should you have questions, please do not hesitate to contact Simona, the Chair of our conference committee via the e-mail: simonamorkeliunaitee@gmail.com.

We look forward to see you there!

May 10 (Thursday)

- 9.45 – Rusnė Marmaitė Myth and ideology: A case study of Prime Minister Theresa May 10.15 – Dovilė Butkutė Populism and ideology in Petro Poroshenko's political discourse
10.30 – Domantas Mikelevičius President Trump's relation to populist ideology
11.00 – Auksė Podrezaitė Metaphor and Myth in Tusk's political discourse
11.30 – Simona Morkeliūnaitė How Emmanuel Macron displays soft and hard power

May 15 (Tuesday)

- 8.45 – Paulius Serapinas Populism in Netanyahu's political discourse
9.15 – Indrė Raudytė Aristotle's rhetorical triangle and metaphor in Erdogan's political discourse
9.45 – Austėja Meidutė Nationalist rhetoric and public legitimacy in Ilham Aliyev's political discourse
10.30 – Greta Gaidelytė Ideology and myth: a case study of President Moon Jae-in 11.00 – Rūta Petkevičiūtė The myth of the leader of a failed state and the pursuit of international unity: a case study of Afghanistan President Mohammad Ashraf Ghani
11.30 – Klaudija Lukošitė Ideology and myth: a case study of President Mahmoud Abbas

May 17 (Thursday)

- 9.45 – Modestas Klimavičius The importance of rhetoric in Emmanuel Macron's political discourse
10.15 – Margarita Babajeva The Unity Myth via Journey Metaphor and populist rhetoric: a case study of President Duda
10.45 – Matas Adomaitis Persuasion and metaphors: a case study of President Erdogan
11.30 – Emilija Puidokaitė World vision as a balance of unity and interest: a case study of Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov
12.00 – Andrius Vaitekėnas Boundaries in the realm of hegemony and ideological opposition us vs. them: a case study of President Dalia Grybauskaitė
12.30 – Ieva Šataitė Ideology and myth: a case study of China's Minister for Foreign affairs

May 22 (Tuesday)

- 8.45 – Urtė Emilija Triukštinaitė Ideology and myth in President of the Republic of Korea Moon Jae-in's political discourse
9.15 – Dominykas Žitkauskas Populism and ideology in Abdel Fatah el-Sisi's political discourse
9.45 – Fausta Roznytė Ideology, myth and rhetoric as a means of constructing the underlying narrative: a case study of Palestine's leader Mahmoud Abbas
10.30 – Lukas Kačiušis The future of the UN and the role of the EU in global politics in Donald Tusk's political discourse
11.00 – Daniel Ilkevič Myth, inspiration and ambition in political discourse: the leaders of Lithuania and Estonia
11.30 – Saulius Bimbiras The aim of Benjamin Netanyahu's Political Rhetoric - Power or Peace?

May 24 (Thursday)

- 9.45 – Mantas Laurinavičius Stability, unity and integrity in the Middle East: a case study of President Abdel Fatah al-Sisi
10.15 – Monika Didžiulytė The United We Stand Myth: a case study of Minister of Foreign Affairs Sergey Lavrov
10.45 – Vilius Kriačiūnas Ideology and myth in Donald Trump's UN General Assembly address of 2017
11.30 – Barbara Paketur Ideology based on metaphors and historical facts in President of Iran Hassan Rouhani's political discourse
12.00 – Gabija Norgilaitė Populism and ideology in political discourse of Andzej Duda
12.30 – Karolis Petronis The Crimean conflict in Petro Poroshenko political rhetoric
13.00 – Kornelija Steinsvik The ideology and myth of Western culture in Theresa May's political discourse